Content rules

Use an accordion to group related information into collapsible sections so users can scan quickly and expand details only when needed.

- Do not nest.
- Allow users to open a single entry (theme or category) in an accordion (settings, Notifications, Billing).
- Expanded content must be short, structured, and scannable. Use it for supporting details—not for lessons, no long paragraphs, no unrelated details.
- Never place navigation, multiple interactive controls, or critical instructions inside expanded area; avoid nested disclosure patterns.
- Expanded content should not exceed one screen height to prevent scroll traps within scrollable layout.
- Titles should remain concise and scannable, with clear wording that reflects the section's content.
- Rows must be independent—supporting one row should not modify or shift content in other rows.
- Use it when the user needs to scan a long or dense mobile information; only use it when progressive disclosure reduces cognitive load.
